

Indigenous Peoples Day Entertainment and Educational Resources

Book: Heartbeat Braves by Pamela Sanderson

Rayanne Larson is working her dream job at Crooked Rock Urban Indian Center, helping out Indigenous people living off the reservation and in the city. But things turn frustrating when the center's new leader hands one of her projects to his nephew, Henry Grant, who has no interest in working for the center...until he meets Rayanne and finds himself drawn to her. Wanting nothing to do with the (annoyingly attractive) man who swept in and stole her beloved project, Rayanne is determined to keep her distance. But that changes when the center faces a crisis and the two have no choice but to join forces.

Podcast: MediaINDIGENA

MediaINDIGENA is a roundtable podcast with host Rick Harp and a group of panelists who tackle weekly affairs in so-called Canada. The podcast draws in people of all backgrounds but appeals to those who enjoy a more academic look at things. They cover all topics, from decolonizing to dismantling. Harp is hilarious, and his podcast will have you laughing and learning history, context, and academic ideas that you might have never heard about.
